

Sardeep Sud Mumbai

Animals are respected in the United States as human beings are. This is a plus point in the U.S. culture, to love pets as well as human beings.

Vasant Mahadeo Sapre
Kolhapur, Maharashtra

To be frank, I am not a lover of pets. In fact, I dislike them. But going through the special articles, my interest was roused.

Arundhati Raja Bangalore
The cover doesn't reflect the basic premise of the editorial—the warmth of the relationship between man and pet.

Leslie Pearson Joseph Chennai
I rate the cover seven out of 10 because I think it's very artistic, elegant and a unique looking cover.

Ganga Sethu

Coimbatore, Tamil Nadu
I liked all the articles on pets, including "Why People Love Dogs," because they would make anyone think why human beings are not able to love each other.

M. Qamar New Delhi

It is a mouth-watering article and it is a matter of pride that India's recipes are becoming popular.

Surinder Singh Bhatia New Delhi

Indian Americans and their achievements in a foreign land: This type of feedback is not available in other magazines. We feel proud of their remarkable achievement.

Sudhir Pawha Lucknow, Uttar Pradesh

I chanced upon the May/June issue of SPAN and was delighted to come across the write-up on Nusrat Durrani, whom I had lost touch with over the last 30 years. I have known his family and him closely as a young teenager, being from my city of Lucknow. With his sterling qualities, his tenacity and sincerity have stood by him in his struggles. I have not forgotten his affectionate and caring moments spent by my bedside during my long bout of ill-health, his bringing food (Awadhi cuisine) which I was fond of. I thank you for updating me on this wonderful young man and his success story.

Mohan Singh Amritsar, Punjab

The erstwhile similarity between Washington, D.C. and New Delhi vis-à-vis taxation is surprising but not known to many Indians, including me.

